Anglican Church Holds Deanery Meet At Tofield

RURAL DEAN BATEMAN WAS IN CHAIR FOR GATHERING

Rev. C. N. Bateman, vicar of St. Thomas' (Ang.) church and rural dean was a visitor to Tofield last week where a meeting of the Wainwright Deanery was held with a 100 p.c. attendance.

Mr. Bateman presided over the gathering, and Rev. J. Anderson, of Edgerton, was appointed secretary-treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Rev. G. Wilson to the Camrose Deanery.

An outstanding item on the agenda was the discussion re travelling expenses for the clergy. Congratulations were extended to Rev. T. and Mrs. Matthews upon the birth of a son (Timothy Peter).

At the close of a vote of thanks was extended to Rev. A. Wallis of Tofield for his hospitality.

Business in Edgerton gave Mr. Bill Stuart change of scenery for a couple of days last week.

"Cynara" Among Best Pictures Of The Year

RONALD COLMAN HAS MADE FEW FILMS BETTER THAN THIS ONE

"Cynara," from the international stage success, is a perfect vehicle for the imitable talents of Ronald Colman, as shown in this latest United Artists picture at the Elite Theatre this week.

Indeed, even the suave, urbane Colman has made few pictures more artistic and more entertaining than this one. Advance reports from Hollywood and from disinterested observers, too—had placed "Cynara" far up in the list of the season's best efforts, and certainly local audiences will agree.

The story, of course, is made to order for Ronald Colman, and, framed with Samuel Goldwyn standard, it makes a great human document. It is crammed full of situations that arise to rare reality and touch deep poignancy. The word "sophisticated" with regard to motion pictures has been very much abused, but here is one instance in which it must be used. For sophistication fairly sticks out of "Cynara," but, contrary to the usual story, it exerts a strong appeal for the so-called masses.

Colman was never better than in the role of Jim Warlock, the young English barrister who, much against his better judgment, is drawn by his best friend into what is called a harmless flirtation and which results in disaster for everybody concerned.

Kay Francis in the role of Warlock's young wife, gives one of those finished performances which is her wont, only this time she is better than ever. And a newcomer from England named Phyllis Barry soars to the heights in this, her first Hollywood effort. Miss Barry is bound to be in great demand because of her artistic portrayal.

Henry Stephenson, who plays the stage role of John Tring, repeats the part in the screen play, and it is his own opinion that the latter is better than the first. Certainly, after seeing the picture, few fans will dispute him.

Diamond Jubilee Of Canadian Mounties

WINNIPEG—It is sixty years next October that the first detachment of North West Mounted Police—a few years ago changed in name to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police—arrived in Alberta to carry British law and order into the lawless settlements of what then was an unorganized territory and the event has called for the many interesting reminiscences.

In the early seventies traders from the United States had pushed their way across the border into what is now the province of Alberta, keepers of whiskey, their currency, trade with the Indians for skins and pelts and horses. The Indians were demoralized and legitimate traders all but ruined. Near the present city of Lethbridge the whiskey traders had a rendezvous which they called Fort Whoopee, and where they staged memorable parties in lawlessness. In 1873 parties from the fort attacked and murdered forty lodges of defenceless Indians.

These and similar crimes led to the formation of the North West Mounted Police, which had an initial strength of 300 men and now has 2,500. The first detachments reached Winnipeg in the Spring of 1874 and the long march westward to Alberta was undertaken. With headquarters in Northern and Southern Alberta disorder speedily was put down, the whiskey traders were chased back across the international line, and the tradition of the Mounties solidly laid in the courage and perseverance of their originals.

Roberts & Spornitz Pitch Two Wins For Wainwright Sunday

On Sunday afternoon last the Wainwright ball club won a double-header at the expense of the Paradise Valley club. Of the two games the first one proved to be the better, it being won by a 4-1 score while in the second game the Wainwright batsmen had the scorekeeper on the jump keeping up, ending up with 14 runs to Paradise Valley's six.

In the opening game Paradise Valley took an early lead when Wainwright's moundsman got off to a rather shaky start, walking the first man and allowing a single to the third which scored the first run, also their only run of the game. They held that lead until the third inning when Wainwright ran in three runs, 3 Roberts, V. Colloid both scoring off singles and V. Gaudet making the complete with a long hit over center field—nice going, Vaughan. They increased their (Continued on page four)

Walsh at the same time as ex-Premier Brownlee resigned.

Upholding Traditions Alberta's Mounties

LOCAL DETACHMENT GOT THEIR MAN SUNDAY NIGHT

Upholding the traditions of the force that "they always get their man" Corporal Collett, R.C.M.P., Wainwright detachment, started out Sunday evening to run down a rumor that bootlegging was being carried on at Irma; and it ended on Monday when Joe Kuroski, a drifter from Menominee, appeared before Magistrate J. Miller.

The raid was made by the corporal on a small shack in the village and upon forcing entry the police discovered a large quantity of liquor which was not being handled "according to Hoyle." Of about 30 cases of two dozens of beer, about one-half were still unopened.

The man was placed under arrest and brought to the cells along with his stock-in-trade, and was taken to Fort Saskatchewan on Tuesday, having declined to take the "trap" of three months—the alternative of a $300.00 fine which was imposed by Mr. Miller after the corporal had submitted his evidence in the case.

Mrs. W. Lane and her son Earl are arranging for a visit with relatives in Detroit, Mich. They plan to motor back in about a month.

Mr. Doug. Wallace is away on a visit to relatives at Laramie, Sask. for a holiday.

Prem. Brownlee Resigns After Nine Years' Rule

SUCCEEDED BY FORMER PROV. TREASURER HON. RICHARD GAVIN REID

On Tuesday last, at the provincial parliament buildings, a caucus of members of the M.F.A. government was held to receive the resignation of ex-Premier Brownlee, and after the acceptance of this, Hon. R. G. Reid, provincial treasurer for the past eleven years, was unanimously chosen to head the party. The new Premier in company with Mr. Brownlee, waited on His Honor Lieut.-Governor Walsh at the government offices where the latter's resignation as leader of Alberta's provincial government was accepted by His Honor, and Mr. Reid's acceptance of that office was confirmed.

The joining of the government in the elections of 1921, Mr. Brownlee held the office of attorney general of Alberta for four years, and for the past nine years has held the office of premier. His future plans are not stated.

Alberta's new premier, Hon. Richard Gavin Reid comes of Scottish descent, being born in that country on January 17th, 1879. After receiving his education at grammar school in Glasgow, he came to Canada in 1903, and was married in September, 1909, to Miss Marion Stuart, of Manville, Alberta.

He entered upon political duties after winning the Verdon seat in 1921 and was appointed minister of health and minister of municipal affairs in the Greenfield government formed in August of that year, being re-elected by acclamation in December, 1921. His appointment as provincial treasurer was made in November, 1922, and when the government took over the natural resources from the Federal government in October, 1930, he was made minister of lands and mines.

Both Mr. Reid and his wife, with their family of four boys and two girls, are ardent Presbyterians.

Mrs. Lew Reed with her daughter, Phyllis, former residents here, who are on their way east from the coast, stayed off last week end and were the guests of Mrs. Frank Horn on Monday. They continued their journey on Monday.

The Bill Brunker cottage at Clear Lake is now occupied. This family moved down last week end.

Sports Committee Clean Up Affairs

BALANCE SHEET SHOWS ONLY SMALL DEFICIT FROM REDUCED ATTENDANCE

In comparing the results of the big celebration on July 1st, with the returns from the 1933 affair, it is clearly shown that the small deficit on the day's proceedings is clearly attributable to two or three causes.

The dubious-looking weather possibly kept large numbers at home for the day—which of course reduced the gate receipts considerably, while the amount of money which the committee were forced to spend in putting the fair grounds in shape after other events which have been held there recently, although admittedly expended, proved a further drain on the resources.

However, in times such as these the efforts of the committee feel that the effort was truly worth while and their objective—giving the youngsters of the district a real enjoyable time for the Silver Jubilee celebration—was attained.

The following is the financial statement which was passed by the committee at their dissolution meeting on Friday last:

Resident of Cummings District Drowns Sunday

LAURENCE ANDRES, 22, PRESUMED VICTIM OF CRAMPS

In the heat of last Sunday afternoon, Laurence Andres, who has lived in the Cummings district for the past eight years, accompanied by a friend decided to take a swim in a small lake on the farm of A. Majury there—some 28 miles north of Wainwright—with disastrous results.

From information it seems that Andres, who was 22 years of age and had jumped into the water while his companion was undressing, but immediately got into trouble, and sank before he could be reached.

The body was finally brought to the surface by grappling hooks after a three-hour search. An inquest was considered unnecessary by Coroner Dr. Knoll who was called to the scene.

On Friday last Mr. and Mrs. W. Yeager, former residents of Wainwright, arrived here from some place at Hamilton, Ont. They plan to spend a couple of months on a visit to their daughter Mrs. Jack Telford.

Crops Profitted Nicely By Recent Rainfall

According to the Bank of Montreal crop conditions in the prairie provinces have been further improved by rain during the past week and all northern districts now have a reserve of moisture, in the southern areas more rain is required. As a result of the drought earlier in the season, wheat yields in southeastern Alberta, southern Saskatchewan and southwestern Manitoba will be small, and coarser grains will produce little more than feed. The weather is unfavorable to grasshoppers, but the threat of their remains.

In Ontario most crops have made fair progress, although in some parts heavy rains are urgently needed as the effects of the long dry spell are beginning to show.

In British Columbia the weather continues favorable and conditions generally are good.

Alberta
Northeastern area: Wheat is heading out at the average height and the condition of coarse grains is good. The hail damage reported at Drumheller on the 29th ultimo was not extensive. Southeastern area: Summer-fallow wheat crops are satisfactory. Pasture and fodder crops have improved. Western area: All crops are advancing favorably. Recent rains in the central area have benefited pastures and ranges. Wild hay is short but good on irrigated land. Sugar beets are making progress.

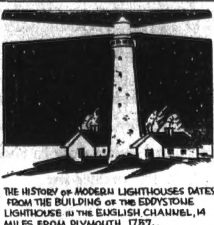

Saskatchewan
Northern area: Growth generally is satisfactory and prospects continue promising. Southern area: Crops are spotty with early wheat in head and with straw short.

Manitoba
In the northern area frequent showers and warmer weather have stimulated growth and prospects are good. In the eastern area moisture conditions are satisfactory and prospects favorable. Hail damage is slight. In the western area recent rains have improved conditions, but there is no reserve moisture and the outlook is only fair.

EASY TO ERR

Just had a letter of inquiry from an anxious wife in a neighboring state; she is anxious about her 66-year old husband. Somebody told her to write me.

He had what is known as a "stroke" nearly one year ago. Was at the hospital four weeks immediately following the unfortunate collapse, and has been in bed "most of the time ever since." Can only hobble around with crutches and with two helpers besides.

This man evidently had a hemorrhage in the brain. One of his arms hangs helpless at his side—the nerves paralyzed. Such things are classified usually under the heading of "Nervous Diseases," though they may be broken-down blood vessels.

The great error: If this man had heeded certain warnings, such as high blood pressure and maybe rapid increases in bodily weight—and if he had just kept in touch with his physician and had his diet carefully supervised—he might not have had this serious condition to battle with. But men will push on and on.

Another error: This man must have had good treatment while in the hospital, but expenses were prohibitive; he went home, and then began the experiment with a bone-adjuster! Adjusting the bones for a broken blood-vessel inside the cranial cavity! Probably no bone of his osseous system was out of place.

This man had a blood-clot in the brain tissue. By this time it has become organized into living tissue, and exerts its constant pressure on the centre governing the arm. Why manipulate the bones below the head? Many, many times efforts put forth with the best of motives are time and money wasted. No cure for the "stroke" now. Simply watch intelligently to keep off another stroke—all we can do.

Agricultural research has demonstrated that young herbage, besides being a rich storehouse of proteins, sugars, starches, and essential minerals, contains carotene which in the body of an animal produces vitamin A. This vitamin promotes growth in farm stock as well as in human beings, and enables them to resist disease.

FIELD DAYS AT SCOTT

For some years it was a practice to hold one large annual picnic at the Dominion Experimental Station, Scott. These grew in size until 1927 when upward to ten thousand came in one day. Such large number are at great disadvantage in seeing the work in progress and discussing problems with members of the staff. Since that date encouragement has been given to smaller organized groups, and allotting certain days when the staff will be at home for this purpose. July 16 to 20 (both inclusive) have been allotted as the dates of holding these field days in 1934.

Experiments in field work comprising over five thousand plots of various sizes offer a diversification of interest to visiting farmers. Among this work might be mentioned a new test of sixteen smooth-surfaced barley and of ten years. Another addition is a special test of twenty early wheat varieties. A feature is also being made of effect of different sowing treatments on yield of grain. A comprehensive experiment has been started on methods of seedling down western rye grass, crested wheat grass and sweet clover. Among field experiments, the many plots dealing with phosphate fertilizers are outstanding. In forage crop studies, perhaps improvement with western rye grass is outstanding, not to mention crested wheat grass. For those interested in horticulture there is approximately three hundred varieties of trees and shrubs, about the same number of varieties of flowers which promise a record display this year. In addition to small fruit trees are over two hundred varieties of tree fruits being given a trial. Livestock men will find much to interest them. Some persons will have problems with bees or poultry which will be gladly discussed.

For visitors who bring their lunch, tea and coffee will be provided on the dates mentioned above. On each day a tour of the fields will commence at 1:30 p.m. If organizing a party write the Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, in advance.

SUMMER FEEDING OF WORK HORSES

For horses at work a combination of feeds in a variety of forms gives best results. Oats, bran, oat shaves and mixed hays are very suitable.

GOING PLACES

Every summer, thousands of people get under way. A dominant urge in the human family is to go places and see things. The urge is facilitated in practice by modern motor cars and paved highways leading to new territory, making rapid and easy progress.

In this day of planning, it seems superfluous to mention that there are two ways of starting out on a motor trip, the one is planned, the other is unplanned. There is an attractive side to the car-free individual who appears little concerned with detail, but most of the apparently carefree persons who successfully tackled great dangers have come through because of careful, if unobtrusive, planning.

It is not suggested that a motor trip involves great danger. Nevertheless, there are certain hazards which, by reasonable forethought, can be overcome, thus avoiding the spoiling of a good holiday by an accident or sickness.

Good brakes are desirable at all times, and when driving on strange roads they are essential for safety. Worn tires are not dangerous for city driving, but a blow-out when travelling rapidly along a highway is not an unusual cause for turning the car over into a ditch. And so, good brakes, good tires, and reliable lights are essential for safety. Worn tires are not dangerous for city driving, but a blow-out when travelling rapidly along a highway is not an unusual cause for turning the car over into a ditch. And so, good brakes, good tires, and reliable lights are essential for safety.

Crushed barley, wheat or rye may bulky feeds such as oats or bran. The former have a tendency to become pasty and "ball up" when being chewed, which may lead to impaction of the stomach or bowels unless they form a part of the concentrate ration but should be fed with other more bulky feeds. The kinds of feed used, the quantity per horse and the manner of feeding depend upon the age, size and condition of the horse, and the nature and severity of the work. It is seldom that two horses are "easy" and other "hard feeders", requiring considerably more grain and roughage for the same amount of work.

A good practice of feeding horses that are doing medium to hard work is to allow a daily ration of one pound of roughage and one pound of grain per hundred pounds live weight. A gallon measure will hold roughly four pounds of whole oats, six pounds of whole barley and seven and one half pounds of whole wheat. When horses are on light work, or part time idle, the grain ration should be cut down at least half. A good plan is to feed work horses on Saturday night a mixture of one-third bran and two-thirds oats or other grain when grain alone is fed. Lack of exercise and continued heavy feeding are two of the greatest enemies of the work horse. At the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, Alberta, the work horses are turned out on grass pasture at night during the summer. The mangers are filled with hay early so they can eat what they like before being turned out for the night. No only does the grass provide succulence which tends to regulate and have a tonic effect on the system, but it decreases the amount of hay needed, and eliminates the necessity of bedding and cleaning the stall each day.

OIL PRODUCTION

Production of oil in Alberta for the first five months of 1934, for a considerable increase over the same period of 1933. The total to May 31, this year was 547,282 barrels of which 523,866 was naphtha and the balance crude oil. In 1933 the production for the five months was 357,431 barrels of which 331,306 was naphtha and the balance crude oil.

All forms of nitrogenous manure increase the growth of grass at the expense of clover.

THE BOOK

THE UNFORGETTABLE SENTENCE

A few weeks ago two young men desiring to enter the Christian ministry were asked, "Do you believe in the Virgin Birth of Christ?" Upon replying they didn't know how to answer the question, nor regard the answer as vital to their work as ministers, they were rejected.

It is no part of the purpose of our little book to deal with controversial subjects, but in approaching the life of Jesus we may perhaps be permitted to point out that the question of whether He was or was not born of a virgin and not seem very important to two of the writers of the Gospels. Mark makes no mention of it. John ignores it. Paul does not once refer to it and if Jesus Himself was much concerned there is no evidence of that fact. When He was assembling His disciples He called a certain Philip of Bethsaida.

Philip findeth Nathanael, and said unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. If this assertion on the part of Philip was a mistake Jesus did not rebuke it nor refuse Philip and Nathanael as disciples because of it. Indeed, one astounding fact about His life and the doctrines which have been built up about it is that that most of the points on which the bitter controversies have been waged were apparently regarded by Jesus Himself as of lesser significance, and some of no significance whatever.

How many cruel debates have arisen over the question of His miracles. He was often reluctant to perform them, and was so fearful that he might be advertised abroad as a wonder-worker and thus have the real significance of His teaching blurred that He frequently urged those whom he had healed to "go and tell no man." The question of baptism has split Christian communions. Jesus, when His success began to bring great crowds to Him so that His disciples were baptizing more than John the Baptist, ceased Himself to baptize anybody.

Twenty-one large boxes of British-grown chrysanthemums were carried to Montreal in the C.P. liner Duchess of Athol, and forwarded by rail to British Columbia. The plants were rooted and grown in specially prepared soil and were tended every day during the entire journey by sea and land.

If you have been grinding away month after month, with your mind and nerves wrought up to fighting tension you need a special tonic—a vacation.

It is the world-famous health builder, the blending of sunshine, fresh air, change of objection, change of scenery, rest and diversion—a vacation.

Plan to enjoy a totally different kind of a life for a short time. New ideas, new scenes, new people, affection, recreation, and relaxation is necessary to health and good spirits. Joy, pleasure and laughter invigorate mind and body; they help to tone up the entire system.

Will you go to the mountains or the woods, to the quiet lake or the busy ocean beach? But while you are planning for and thinking the good things you will have, and the rest you hope to enjoy, keep in mind that people are more likely to be hurt or hurt themselves when in strange surroundings than when in familiar ones. Don't let your vacation be spoiled by a needless mishap. You can guard against most accidents.

REVISE THE

B.N.A. ACT

Supporting the widespread demand for the revision of the Canadian Constitution so as to bring it into line with present-day conditions, Canadian Business, published by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce says that measures pertaining to operations, such as the Companies' Act, relief administration, social services, all sooner or later bump up against the brick wall of "provincial jurisdiction."

It thinks that there should be no opposition to a revision of the B.N.A. Act, especially if the confidence of the Province of Quebec were secured by making it clear that rights obtained by the Treaty of Paris concerning religion, language and the Napoleonic code would be guaranteed to the province. "These and other vested provincial interests," it says, "need not be affected in amending our constitution in the interests of good, effective and economical government. The sanctity of our constitution is not rendered more sacred by the fetish of legal rights."

The adoption of some reasonable method of revising the constitution and of amending it afterwards when necessary, is a task that must be undertaken in the near future. Canadians do not wish to be branded as inferior to the people of other federal countries, which long ago made provision for the amending of their constitutions.

HEATH

A number of ladies of St. Patrick's W. A. journeyed to Edmonton on Thursday afternoon when they were the guests of the W. A. there. Church matters of mutual interest were discussed after which these present enjoyed a delicious lunch served by the hostess, Mrs. Sawyer.

Heath mission grounds are sure the scene of considerable activity this week for their church convention. A number of large tents have been set up to accommodate outside visitors, and services will be held regularly during the whole week. Among the speakers to be heard are Mr. Silverdale, Mr. Jenkins, and Rev. Magnus.

Miss Alberta Davis is home from Three Hills to attend the gospel mission convention.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. J. Cummings has had to spend a week in hospital owing to an injured eye, and wish her speedy recovery.

Information is handed on to our readers that all of the elevators at Heath will be closed at the end of this week and will not re-open until the morning of August 1st.

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

FOR EDMONTON EXHIBITION

In addition to the usual reduced rates good for the week of the Edmonton Exhibition, of fare-and-a-quarter for the round trip, the C.N. and C.P. Railways have signified their intention to put on two 3-day excursions at a cent-and-a-half a mile. See your local ticket agent for dates.

CLEAR LAKE

Mrs. Lally and her daughter Joyce are occupying the Dunsmore cottage for a summer vacation.

Miss Margaret Spence, of Heath and Miss Lexie Morrison, of Green-shields are enjoying a week's camping.

Misses Viola and Thelma Vail and Misses Jane and Eleanor Thomas and Glen Thomas are occupying the Vail camp.

Mr. F. Ganderton is busy renovating the Courcier cottage before the family move down.

Fishing on Arm lake is proving to be just as successful and popular as in previous years. Some nice fish have also been caught in Clear lake this season.

Mrs. H. C. Wallace and family have moved into their cottage for the summer.

LO, THE POOR INDIAN

Canada has fallen down badly in the search for the lost tribe of Indians. So far, it appears as if the Dominion will be unrepresented, in the first convention of modern Indian store Indians ever held in the world which is to be staged during the Century of Progress Fair at Chicago later this year. The unique collection is being sponsored by Pontiac. Pontiac is an Indian name and the Company's trade mark is an Indian head. Pontiac dealers in the United States have been successful in getting together some good specimens of the old cigar-store Redskin, but no Canadian examples have been dug up. Incidentally, in the Pontiac exhibit at the World's Fair the famous mechanical talking Indian chief will again be present this year.

DISTRIBUTION OF TREES

A very large increase in distribution of trees to farmers, schools, etc. in Alberta from the provincial nurseries at Oliver, near Edmonton, was noted this spring. The total distribution was 34,339 trees, compared with only 8,066 last year. The trees this year went to 114 different points in the province, and were taken by 183 farmers, 18 schools, 13 institutions and 14 cemeteries and community grounds. The largest distribution was of white spruce, 21,128 of these being sent out. Next spring 110,000 white spruce will be available. Distribution of caragana was stopped this year, but Caragana seed is now being given out by district agriculturists, and there is a plentiful supply of this for farmers, schools, etc.

meeting and the Mayor and Secretary Treasurer were authorized to issue cheques in payment of all accounts included in the report in a total of $849.21.

The Committee on Property, Assessment and By-Laws reported, recommending that permission of Council be required for the erection of signs on property owned by the town that all signs to be erected be placed at least one hundred feet from roads, streets or avenues and that a fee of $1.00 annually be charged by the town for the privilege of erecting a sign.

On motion, the report of the committee was accepted and the recommendations endorsed and the report incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

The following report was submitted by the Committee on Parks and Cemetery, viz:

That in addition to a letter from our Secretary to the Gilt Edge M.D. Council who meet today, Councillor Welch, in absence of Councillor McLeod, chairman of this committee attended their meeting and while there the Gilt Edge Council after discussing the matter, passed a resolution, tendering the same amount of help in the upkeep of the cemetery as they gave last year.

Councillor Rattray's division will furnish teams and wagons and the other divisions will furnish men to work under the direction of the chairman of this committee.

Mr. E. W. Beasley had charge of this work last year, and his supervision was so satisfactory to all concerned that Mr. Traynor, the councillor of his division has agreed to have Mr. Beasley look after the work this year, in co-operation with Councillor McLeod, and these two parties will arrange and set a date for the commencement of this work.

This committee on behalf of the Council extend thanks to Gilt Edge municipality for their assistance and interest in this work.

On motion, the report of the Committee on Parks & Cemetery was accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

The Committee on Public Health reported as follows:

The work of this department is being attended to in a satisfactory manner. Complaints are being attended to promptly and other difficulties such as the scavenger are being explained to the ratepayers with a view to eliminating friction wherever possible.

At this time of the year, when heavy rains tend to fill the cess pools with surface water, complaints from this source are more numerous than at any other time of the year. The present scavenger treats the public to retain the good will of the citizens and gain their co-operation in his department.

On motion, the report of the Committee on Public Health was accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

A By-law, amending By-law No. 192 of the Town of Wainwright, was then introduced in the regular manner by consent of Council, was given first and second reading and, with the unanimous consent of Council receives its third reading at this meeting and is hereby passed and authorized granted for its being signed with the Corporate Seal of the Town of Wainwright under the attesting signatures of the Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer.

On motion, Council was regularly adjourned.

lead by one more in the 9th inning. W. Roberts scoring off a single. This ended the scoring giving Wainwright the game by a comfortable margin of 4-1.

Paradise Valley made eight safe hits and one run while Wainwright hit out seven safeties and scored four runs.

The second game supplied the fans with plenty of free hitting (too much for real good ball) on both sides as the following figures indicate. Wainwright batted out twenty-five safe hits for fourteen runs while Paradise Valley got sixteen hits and getting in six runs.

Wainwright started to click from the start getting in three runs in the 1st inning. Paradise Valley came right back in their turn to bat and did their best to tie the score but fell short of the mark by only managing 3-2. From then on it was Wainwright's ball game, they never being in any great danger, adding two to their score in the second inning and one in the third, giving them a total of six. Paradise Valley rallied in the fifth inning, but again fell short, getting two runs making the score read 6-4. Both teams increased their total by one in the 7th. The eighth inning afforded plenty of hitting—but unfortunately for Paradise Valley it was Wainwright doing the swinging putting seven runs over the plate while Paradise Valley only managed to get one across. This completed the scoring for the game, the final score reading Wainwright 14, Paradise Valley 6.

New Pensions Plan

Contribution to the Annuity Trust Fund, of which the Company is Trustee, is voluntary. An employee may contribute from one per cent to ten per cent of his salary, after ten years' service. Up to and including five per cent of the employee's salary, the Company will match the employee's contribution. Annuity in the form elected by the employee at retiring, is then determined by the amount of the employee's contributions plus the Company's contribution and interest thereon.

The pension regulations are to be administered by a board of seven members, four of whom will represent the Company and three represent the employees. The Annuity Trust Fund of which the Company is Trustee will be invested in government-guaranteed securities.

The new plan offers the employee the choice of three forms of pension, two of which will protect his family as well as himself. It permits withdrawal of annuity contributions, plus accrued interest, if employee leaves the service before retiring age, and for withdrawal under special conditions of necessity. It provides for payment to proper persons of accumulated contributions toward annuity, plus accrued interest, in event of employee's death before retiring.

The minimum service provided is payable to all existing employees who joined the service at 50 years and under and to all new employees aged 45 years or under on joining the service, on retirement at 65 years.

Service rules and regulations under the new plan are the same as at present. Pensions now being paid are not affected and pension rights to date of the new plan becoming effective are preserved in form of non-contributory service pension, payable by the Company.

Upon retirement at 65 years of age the Company grants the basic pension or service pension and provides an annuity based on the total of employee's and Company's contribution.

In the case of employees retired on account of illness between the ages of 60 and 65 years the provision is for basic or service pension and annuity as outlined above.

In the case of positions which are abolished, employees 50 years of age and over and with 15 years' service may be pensioned at the discretion of the Trustees.

Employees who are retired on account of injuries sustained while in service and who have 10 or more years' service, may be pensioned at the discretion of the Trustees.

Record Attendance

Is Expected For

Edmonton Exhibition

This Year's Show to be one of The Finest In The History of Alberta

It is expected that all roads will lead to the Edmonton Exhibition the week of July 16 to 21, as unusual interest is evinced in the many new features which the Exhibition management have arranged for this year's show.

Many refuse to believe that farm tractors can be run safely at around 50 miles per hour, but, seeing is believing, and this may be seen at the tractor races at the Edmonton Exhibition.

Another unique feature will be the giant television show. This was one of the most talked of attractions at the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto the past winter. Prominent citizens of Edmonton, and local artists will speak or sing or play in a studio on the Exhibition grounds, and in a separate theatre patrons will see and hear them.

"Alpha" the robot is another novel attraction that everyone will want to see. A 7000 pound mechanical man, dressed in a suit, smokes, fires a gun and performs many unbelievable feats.

HANGE is the prime essence of a vacation and a canoe trip in Canada is one method by which the stress of daily life can be exchanged for a tranquil, carefree existence. It may be for a limited time only but its effects are felt all the year round. Jostling crowds, rumble of traffic, hot pavements and the air have no place in the life of the canoeist.

A large number of interesting routes are outlined in "Canoe Trips in Canada," a booklet recently issued by the National Parks of Canada, Department of the Interior, Ottawa. Following the routes described therein one can drift lazily along or relive the strenuous days of the voyageur. There are cruises which lead for a hundred miles through canal stream and lake with alternating civilization and lightly wooded country. There are long, smooth flowing rivers and placid lakes on which one can travel for days, and by contrast rushing streams which ever and again break into foaming rapids and thundering falls. There are adventurous trips through wilderness country along routes once followed by Indian and fur-trader, now almost forgotten so seldom are they travelled. Strange geological formations, wild life, good fishing, the charming and the picturesque await the advent of one's canoe on the numerous and varied water trails of Canada.

Crop Report Shows Favorable Conditions

As a result of frequent rains and ideal growing conditions through the month of June in almost all areas of the province, the crop situation in Alberta can be said at this date to be more favorable than has been the case for some years. With few exceptions, the various districts in the province report all crops making splendid progress. One of the exceptions is the area most seriously affected by the May drought, east and south of the Goose lake line in the south eastern part of the province. Stubble crops in this area have not fully recovered as a result of recent rains and the loss on these will be considerable. In nearly all other districts in the south all crops have made substantial recovery and are making rapid progress under the stimulus of heavy rains. The total loss from the early drought will therefore be comparatively small. The summerfallow crops in the south give prospect of very good yields. The only other discordant note in the chorus of gratification over greatly improved conditions comes from a narrow strip of territory across the central portion of the province for some miles north of the Red Deer river, which strangely enough has not shared with other nearby districts the heavy rains that have fallen during June. In fact, rain is quite urgently needed over this limited area. In the Peace River Country rain was wished for until the present week, when good showers brought needed stimulus to the crops which, however, had not begun to suffer to any extent. In the north central districts, from Leduc north to Athabasca, and east, north-east and west of Edmonton for 200 miles, the prospects are for a heavy crop. In some districts early sown wheat is headed out, and all wheat is now in the shot blade. Coarse grains are showing very promising prospects and the outlook for feed is much brighter than for the past four or five years. Pasture and range conditions have recovered excellently from the early drought and live stock is responding well, and is generally in a greatly improved state.

The hay crop is now being taken off and is a fairly substantial one though short in some districts owing to the early drought. First cutting of alfalfa is now general and is a fair crop. Grasshoppers are still active, but although the infestation this year has been very heavy, and some damage was done earlier in the season, the well-organized and directed control campaign with excellent co-operation from the farmers who are now more experienced in the poisoning operations, has been extremely effective and the total damage from this cause will be small.

The low rate excursion, resumed by the Canadian railways in February 1932, had resulted in bringing large numbers of people back to train travel.

Between them the railways had handled more than 600,000 passengers, presenting combined revenue amounting to $1,500,000. The railways' experiments demonstrated that public would travel by train under favorable conditions and the low rate excursions had brought the railways many thousands of passengers who were not likely to have travelled otherwise.

The operating of excursions had provided work for train crews and other railway employees and it was found that the majority of travellers were those going to stay with friends; rather than strangers going to another city to stay at hotels.

SYNOPSIS

The passengers of number 12 wondered about the pretty, uncommunicative stranger. And the girl's thoughts were filled with memories of the night, three weeks ago, when she had driven her roadster into the sea. She had been amazed to find no newspaper references to the thing she feared most. But even so, the girl of that night was no longer.

Near the sun-baked station the town of Marston straggled informally, a single dusty street with a few dwindling offshoots on each side. In the door of the post-office a young man appeared, looking up the road toward the station. He was tall and sun-browned, but without the weather-beaten, desert dried look. He had an arrogant nose with pride in every line of it, rather nice gray eyes, clear and steady, and a pleasant, finely curved mouth, curiously at war with the prideful nose. He caught sight of a shabby automobile over by the station, and a faint grin twitched at the corners of his mouth. He was wondering what some people of his acquaintance would say if they ever came to Marston and had to be met by that car.

"It looks like an old hobo," he reflected, "but Petry loves it like a baby. Guess I'll go over and wait there."

He strode down the dusty street. It was by no means a crowded street but the few people he met all seemed to know him. Their greetings were friendly, although perhaps not so joyful as they might have been, say, to Boone Petry, who worked for him, or to Tom Bagley who kept the general store, or any of the few scattered ranch owners who occasionally came in for supplies. He seemed in a way, just a little apart from their every day familiar interests. Only when he passed the deserted real estate office his face darkened slightly. The forlorn little building, sleekly revealing its uselessness to any scornful eye, was undoubtedly a long standing offense to him. Out of the shimmering distance a dark blob had appeared. At the station a few loungers came to life for one of the major events of Marston's day. Boone Petry, propped contentedly against the weathered boarding a few feet away, awoke to a mild interest. The operator grunted sociably.

"Expectin' company?"

The generous rarely get rich.
Do your best and leave the rest.
The "yellow peril" of the world is gold.
Success builds targets for the envious.
Mercy is a jewel in the crown of justice.
Without sorrow we should not appreciate happiness.
Battlefields demand less courage than daily life.
If you have to reduce your standards to be a "good fellow" you're with the wrong crowd.

"Some stuff for the boss." "He gets a lot of stuff, don't he? Must have some real money to spend." Petry blinked at the glinting tracks and apparently forgot to answer. The operator took another tack. "Jim Bagley says he hears Duane's out 'most every day, pokin' the old Juniper full of holes. Barry's a nice fella, but if he keeps on like that, he'll end up the same way his uncle did."

"Maybe, and maybe not. I ain't inquired his destination, but wherever Barry aims to go, he most generally arrives at."

The conversation seemed unprofitable, but the operator was a hard man to down.

"Speakin' of destinations, I saw the whole Simpson tribe headin' out of town this mornin', bag and baggage. If they'd of piled anything more on that flivver it would of laid down and died. They're moving over to the country seat."

Petry grinned. The Simpson's nearest neighbor—a trifling matter of five or six miles—was Barry Duane and it could not be denied that there had been no great amount of neighborly visiting between Eagle's Perch and the little ranch where the Simpson family dribbled out its happy-go-lucky existence.

What's happened?" he inquired mildly. "Somebody leave Sim ten dollars and he'd be just get exhausted to work?"

"Don't talk about a triflin' ten to Lanzo. He's sold his place, and from the general excitement in the Simpson family I'd say it must be a pretty good cash payment."

The jar of the two-thirty-eight closed the conversation abruptly. Number 12 clanked to a stop with a long sigh. Petry looked along the line of dusty coaches nodded familiarly to the brakeman, gallantly laden with somebody's suitcases, and started toward the forward end. Then he stopped, as abruptly as though he had been jerked at the end of a halter.

Silken ankles and beautifully shod feet were coming down the gritty steps of old Number 12. Petry looked up dizzily at a slim young woman and she had the loveliest skin that Boone had ever seen and an engaging little mouth which looked rather sober just now but would surely show lovely teeth when she smiled, and lustrous big eyes with a growing dimmy in them as they looked beyond the ugly little station toward the forlorn straggle of houses which constituted the town of Marston. That was Marston's first glimpse of Anne Cushing as she stepped from the two-thirty-eight directly into the path of Boone Petry, ex-cowman, ex-ranchman and general factotum to Barry Duane.

Evoluntarily he swept off his battered hat, showing a grizzled head, a skin weathered to a leathery brown, and light blue eyes which gave him a deceptively innocent air. The girl smiled at him. Some of the dimmy retreated.

"You are Mr. Simpson, aren't you? I am Anne Cushing." Petry gulped visibly. "My name is Petry, Boone Petry. If you're lookin' for Lon Simpson, he he's moved away from here. He sold his place just recent."

"Yes, I know. I bought it. But I thought he might be here to—" well, to show me the place, I suppose. I'm afraid that was a rather silly idea."

"No ma'am," said Petry helplessly. The dismayed look was hovering in her eyes again. He shifted his weight from one foot to another, and thought earnestly of things he would like to do to the departed Simpson.

"I guess Sim's kind of careless that way," he added apologetically. "But don't let that bother you, ma'am. If there's anything I can do, or the best either, we'd sure be pleased to."

The local groaned in all its length and gathered its complaining joints into motion again, leaving them standing there. At a little distance, just beyond the platform, the young man who had come over from the post-office stood and watched them with puzzled curiosity. The few dawdling loungers had frankly turned their heads in the same direction.

The girl's eyes were sweeping the sun-warped platform and the hot road beyond. They hesitated for an instant as they caught the unobtrusive scrutiny of the brown young man, and then passed on composedly. They came back to Boone Petry.

"It's awfully kind of you to take so much trouble. If you could just tell me where I could get a stage or rent a car, I think I can manage all right."

"It ain't a bit of trouble, but there ain't any stage, because there ain't any place in particular for a stage to go. And there ain't any garage, either, not for hirin' cars. But that needn't matter a bit, because our place is just a spell beyond yours, and we can take you a lift easy. Any time you like."

Petry rubbed his chin nervously with a mahogany paw. Here was a situation calling for diplomacy, and diplomacy, he felt, had never been one of his stronger points. He sent a hunted look around, caught the eye of the watching young man and signalled him with a furtive thumb. The girl was thanking him.

"That would be splendid, but I hate to be such a nuisance."

"Not a-tall, ma'am." The young man was at his elbow now, looking interested. Looking more than interested. "Miss Cushing, meet my boss, Mr. Barry Duane. Barry this lady's just bought the Simpson place, and Sim's lit. I've told it's right on our way and we can take her out any time she wants to go."

"Of course we can. Very glad to. Not a single blink betrayed that the Simpson place was out of their homeward way by some miles of singularly bad road."

"It's awfully good of both of you. I didn't expect to be a charge on the community as soon as I arrived."

"The community," said Barry Duane, "considers itself in luck. Now about this place of yours. When do you get possession?"

"I've got it now."

"Yes, of course," he hesitated, and caught Petry's nervous eye. Petry cleared his throat.

"I was thinking," he ventured, "seeing there's nobody out there now, maybe the lady might like to put up at the hotel here, until her folks come."

"But you see, there isn't anyone else to come," Anne Cushing laughed, for the first time in three long weeks and Barry Duane thought it was the loveliest laugh he had ever heard.

"You really mustn't be worried a-about me," she said in that lovely voice. "I'm not a bit afraid of staying alone. I thought I'd try to get a man and his wife. I meant to have an advertisement for them before I started for the ranch. Can I do this?" Barry laughed. "No, I'm afraid you can't. There's no paper to advertise in, this side of the country seat. At least there's no printed one. The unofficial way is to mention whatever you want over at Jim Bagley's general store, and then wait for the returns to come in. Any other suggestions, Petry? How about Martha Larabee?"

"First rate!" Petry cheered visibly. "Martha ain't exactly a man and wife but she's pretty near as good."

He bent over and picked up a fat suitcase. Barney did the same. "And now," he said, "for Martha Larabee and the general store."

"This," said Anne Cushing to herself, "is a funny dream. Pretty soon I shall wake up and find that it isn't so at all."

Her spirits had soared unaccountably. She wanted to laugh as she was politely herded toward the shabby car. It was less than five minutes since she had stepped from the train and here she was, trotting confidently along with two perfect strangers, who had taken herself, her luggage and apparently all her problems into their capable hands.

At the far end of the straggling street a wooden cottage, better kept than most, sat a little back in a yard where most borders of flowers had been encouraged to grow. They stopped. Petry went in. He was gone five minutes. Anne began to wonder what was happening. Suppose the efficient Mrs. Larabee should decline to come.

The front door opened and a woman came out. She was old and comfortably plump, with greyed brown hair and an air of practical competence. Her face was strong and shrewd, and not without humor. Petry came out behind her, with an uncertain grin on his homely face. Evidently the redoubtable Martha had declined to commit herself.

"This is the lady, Martha. Miss Cushing, this is Mr. Larabee."

"I hope you can come, Mrs. Larabee. I really don't know what there is to be done yet."

Martha looked at the girl in the car and a smug and slightly anxious face.

"I'll come," she said briefly, and permitted herself a grim grin of a smile as she nodded to the car's owner. She went on briskly, calmly taking the situation in hand.

"You wait here for me, and I'll get with you to the store. It won't take me two minutes."

She went back into the house. Such trifling matters as wages, duties and hours had evidently not entered into her decision at all.

"Passed with honors!" said Barry Duane. "Martha came out to look you over, and if she hadn't liked you, looks you couldn't have argued her in to coming at any price."

She laughed and sobered, looking out at the endless waste that went on and on into the hazy distance.

I knew I was under inspection. I was so afraid I wouldn't pass muster I scarcely dared breathe. She looks so dependable."

"Martha's pure as gold—and here she comes. Now for the store and your supplies. Another half hour and we'll be on our way."

They were off in much less time than that, thanks to Martha Larabee's brisk supervision. Marston's brief sensation was over, at least for the time being, but the repercussions still echoed. All Marston knew it now. A pretty young thing with a soft voice and delicate hands had bought the Simpson ranch, thirty miles out across the Juniper, and expected to run it.

Male Marston admired, but shook its head; Female Marston sniffed.

"Looks like she had money," said Jim Bagley hopefully. "She sure is pretty."

"She's too pretty," said his wife tartly. "Girls who look like that and wear clothes like that don't go streakin' off to out-of-way places unless there's somethin' queer back of it."

The loungers around the store preserved a polite silence.

"And what's more," said the lady heatedly, "that suit she wears is handsome, just handsome, but when she took the coat off, while she was waitin' for Barry Duane to come back and dance around her, I looked inside to see where it came from, and the tag had been ripped off! That don't look like any accident to me."

Fortunately for her peace of mind, the girl who called herself Anne Cushing had no suspicion of the too eager eye which had found that evidence of a discarded identity in her coat. She did have a faintly disagreeable memory of a sharp-faced woman who had been rather offensively inquisitive but that could have meant no more than the ill-restrained curiosity of a small-town gossip. She put it behind her, and settled back contentedly.

Marston, low against its sands, had vanished in a sprawling blur. The old car made excellent time. Petry was driving. Martha Larabee sat beside him. Barry Duane sat with Anne in the rear seat.

Blazing sunlight beat down, and a long plume of dust waved and wavered in their wake. The road ran on

Hints for the Household

Conducted By Betty Barclay

IF YOU CRAVE YOUR CALORIES COLD, TRY AN ICE BOX PIE

The hot weather appetite often rebels against heavy foods, preferring crisp salads for the mainstay at dinner to such dishes as meat and potatoes or the other hot standbys we are used to. A really nourishing dessert should be planned as the finish for such a meal—nourishing, but tempting. An ice box pie or ice box cake is full of calories and gives the body energy needed to carry on in warm weather as well as cool. When it can be made by the new short cut method, with absolutely no cooking, it is no trouble to prepare even on a hot day.

Magie Berry Cream Pie

1 and one-third cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup raspberries
½ cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons finely powdered confectioners' sugar.

Unleaked crumbs crust. Blend together sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice. Add raspberries. Pour into an eight-inch plate lined with an unbaked crumb crust. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners' sugar and chill thoroughly before serving.

To make the unbaked crumb crust, roll enough vanilla wafers in halves to stand around the edge of pie plate. Cover bottom of plate with crumbs, and fill spaces between wafers. Pour in filling as usual.

Cellophane Lost
½ cup sweetened condensed milk
4 tablespoons raspberry or strawberry jam
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup whipping cream
1 package cellophane-wrapped

Blend together sweetened condensed milk, jam and lemon juice. Fold into whipped cream. Carefully open top of package of cookies and remove all but bottom cookie. Place a large spoonful of filling on this cookie, add another cookie and press down. Repeat until all are used. Chill in refrigerator tightly. Place in refrigerator overnight. When ready to serve remove paper, slice diagonally. Garnish each serving with whipped cream if desired and maraschino cherry. Heavy wax paper may be substituted for cellophane.

ahead of them, mile after mile, with nothing to impede their view. There wasn't a house in sight, nothing moving. In the opulent field of sunshine distance took on strange colors, turning to purple in the folds of those sudden hills.

"You are in Juniper Valley now, Duane told her. "You must remember that because it is your next door neighbor. A few thousand years ago there was a river here, but it has been dry a long time. I suppose it looks pretty ugly to you, but it has its points, and after the rains it will be streaked with purple and gold."

"Purple and gold." She narrowed, thoughtful eyes and stared at it, half dreaming.

"No, I don't think it is ugly. It's fascinating. It's empty and brooding, and rather terrible, but it beckons you. It keeps promising you something, and you want to go on and on until you find it."

The grey eyes warmed. They almost blazed. She had a quick feeling that somewhere behind this pleasant brown young man there was an eager little boy, rather pathetically anxious to have someone admire a thing he loved, but with all a little boy's sensitiveness to rebuff. That was curious, when in other ways he seemed so completely poised and assured, quite as much so as any man she knew. She wondered what had happened, to make him feel like that.

How Britain Has Done It!

Condensed from Maclean's Magazine
James Wedgwood Drawbell, Editor of the London Sunday Chronicle

Less than five years ago Britain's very existence was threatened. Because of our dependence on international trade, we were in greater danger, even than during the darkest moments of the war. A new and zealous nationalism, born of economic pressure, was impelling nations to be sufficient unto themselves and independent of their neighbors. Every such move by other powers was a move against Great Britain's lifeblood. But now Britain is emerging from the most ruthless trade war in history stronger than when she was dragged into it. Stronger? Yes. British work-shops actually employ more hands today than they did in the boom years of free trade. Nor have we lost our place as a trading nation. Although the volume of trade has declined, we are still the world's greatest exporters and carriers. And if prosperity returned to the world tomorrow, we should be better equipped than any other country to seize the new opportunities.

How was all this brought about? It has come to pass in less than three years--since the summer of 1931, when Viscount (then Mr.) Snowden, in a startling speech, made the country aware of its peril and called it to action. The Government resigned. At the subsequent General Election the National Government was swept into power on a wave of patriotic enthusiasm. There had been no such display of national feeling since the end of the war. Flags came out of attics and were flown in the streets. Cinema and theatre orchestras played "God Save the King." His Majesty's portrait on the screen brought crowds to their feet, cheering. Bands even played "Rule Britannia"--an almost forgotten tune.

That did not last. It never does in Britain. But after that one patriotic yell, to remind ourselves and neighbors that we were altogether in this, we settled down to work. Without complaint and without hissing, we went on paying higher taxes than any other people on the face of the earth, and faced without grumbling the prospect of paying even more. But to the man in the street, the balancing of the Budget was a mysterious process, he realized that there was something that must be done and he undertook to do his part. One result, three months after the General Election, was a rush to pay income tax before it was due.

We abandoned the fiscal system. Free Trade and the Gold Standard under which, in the 19th century, we advanced to the forefront of nations. We have learned to use our new tariffs as weapons in bargaining with foreign countries and as levers in negotiating. Those who predicted an enormous rise in the cost of living as a result of tariffs have been made to look foolish by the actual results. If food prices have risen, the fractional increase is imperceptible even to the poorest. Clothing prices and rents have dropped. The fact remains that tariffs have brought no hardship to British workers, but on the contrary have provided work for many thousands who otherwise would have been out of the door.

The only citizen who has "taken a cut" is he who possesses a fixed income. Here elsewhere the rentier class has had to revise its notion of proper return from "safe" investments. The five per cent of boom days has gone, and a series of Conversion Loans has relieved the taxpayer of the great burden of paying an uneconomic rate of interest on public debt. It is generally agreed that the conversion of our five per cent Government loans to 3½ per cent was the greatest series of financial transactions ever attempted by any government. By the conversion of £2,000,000,000 of five per cent War Loan bonds alone, we saved annually some £23,000,000.

It was recently stated in court that more than 90 per cent. of the goods on sale in British chain stores, similar to your "five and ten", were British made. That could not have been said three or four years ago, before the flood of cheap goods from America, Germany, Japan and Czechoslovakia was checked. This great change has not been wrought by tariffs alone, for even to-day the low wage countries are able to offer us goods, duty paid, at prices that compete with our own. What has brought it about is the belief of the mass of British people that our own products, at anything like comparable prices, are best, and their silent determination to "Buy British."

Four years ago there were more foreign cars than British on our streets. Today foreign cars are rare. It is no longer "posh" or "swell" to own one. British manufacturers, instead of taking advantage of the high duties to raise prices, have actually lowered them, and the British motor car is better money's worth today than ever before. In a similar manner we have ousted foreign radio sets, electrical goods, and other products that threatened to swamp our industries. Retail trade also has been booming recently. More people are buying British-made gloves, clocks, hosiery and vacuum sweepers, even though these could be imported, duty and carriage paid, at the same or lower cost.

Accompanying and supporting this mass effort, the Government has carried out widespread schemes of reorganization in all the great industries, notably in agriculture, which we are always surprised to find is still our principal industry. Production of wheat, milk, pigs, and other commodities has been put into the hands of various boards answerable to the government, and marketing is so controlled as to ensure fair prices to producers and public. The production and distribution of coal, too, are similarly controlled. Just as in America, under the NRA, wasteful methods of cutthroat competition have been abolished in industry at large, by codes and price-fixing arrangements.

We have unemployment. Mr. MacDonald is reconciled to the prospect of our always having about 2,000,000 idle would-be workers to keep. But 700,000 who were idle a year ago are working in industry today, and this reduction in unemployment naturally means a great saving to the country in lessening the "drain of the dole."

I use the word "dole" in any derogatory sense. It is no more charity than any other insurance benefit paid at maturity is charity. Before and during the war, the Unemployment fund was self supporting and a "dole" sound; now it is not, and Mr. Chamberlain has to provide for each budget. In the last 12 months the cost to the nation has been about £85,000,000, which is greater than the national cost of education. But as a result of it nobody needs to starve.

For the mass of us the standard of living is higher than before the depression. There are more luxuries in our homes; we are buying more and better food and clothing. Our houses, especially those of the working people, are roomier and better built. There are at least three times as many bathrooms in England today as there were five years ago.

I do not lose sight of the stagnant, grass-grown shipyards of Newcastle and Belfast, or of the Lancashire looms made idle by Japanese competition; but our gains outweigh our losses. Meanwhile our exports rise, and unemployment drops. Our unemployment is still formidable? Yes, but not alarming. In fact, it is hard to think of anything that could alarm us now.

Hibben, of the Westinghouse Light Company, made recently in an address at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto that "today there are some 10,000 different kinds of artificial light sources."

Approximately 75,000 people own the Canadian Pacific Railway through their ownership of the company's common stock. Of these, 36,000 live in Canada. Of the balance, 21,000 live in other parts of the British Empire, mostly in England, with 16,000 in the United States and 5,400 in other countries, mostly continental Europe.

For the first time in western Canada, an impressive ceremony, the investiture of the Knights of St. John was held recently at the Hotel Vancouver, Vancouver when six British Columbian were admitted by King George, sovereign head of the order to high honors. Old world costumes and strange rites added to the dignity and color of the proceedings.

Railways and their important function in the economic existence of the State were stressed by G. G. Ommamey, development commissioner of the Canadian Pacific Railway at the annual banquet of the Traffic Club of Hamilton recently. They had, he said, contributed materially to development of natural resources, building up of industries and in promoting land settlement and agriculture.

Hallway and motor truck transportation are both essential to the economic wellbeing of Canada and neither should be antagonistic to the other, stated Hon. R. J. Munton, minister of railways and canals, at a national conference on transportation held at Ottawa recently. But, he added, while highways are subject to strict regulation and control, motor truck service has not as yet been brought under any comparable control or regulation.
